Dear Wiener

Did you ever get a note from me? I addressed it "Malcolm" Stret, but it occurred to me afterwards that you might have meant "Magdalen St." and I had missed it. If you are in London any time during the vac. you will probably find me at the address below.

Sincerely

Dear Horace

[Dec., 1914]

I am glad to know that my letter reaches you. I don't know just what I shall do in vacation, but should like to get hold of you. I was planning to retire somewhere in the country with books; travelling sounds expensive and one can't leave England anyway. Let me know what you are to do when you have decided.

I am doing my work under Joachim.

I also have J. A. Smith, who I imagine is unknown outside of Oxford. Bradley is seldom up, and never teaches. I should like to have a chance to meet him.

You seem to be doing Phil. rather than math. I can't imagine what on earth you are doing with McTaggart, unless you are reading Hegel or drinking whisky.

Sincerely
T S Eliot

Dear Mr.

I work along steadily as usual, but get nowhere. Moore says my work is not worse than last year, and even a little better, perhaps, but he thought last year that my Bowdoin paper was worthless.
I don't know what?

I put some extra bush in my for Oxford, & then, perhaps, for

I'm glad you're o.k.

I don't know yet what I'll do in the vac. I really think there is nothing for me to do but to stay in Cambridge & grind away. I shall not enjoy it, but then, I know nobody with whom I could take a trip & nowhere to go, and there is nothing to see in England at this time of year. The weather is simply filthy: no snow, but drizzle, drizzle, drizzle: regular pneumonia weather.

Dear Webster,

I have let come a broad-side in the Boston Herald of to-morrow morning. It's a corker. I have found a book that is worse than Bernhard's, and it is written by a professor of the University of Leipzig. He says that the more moral they are, that if Germany does not

Dear ma:

I showed the paper I am working on now to a friend of mine (demonstrator in the psych. lab.) & he liked it. I also talked it over with Moore, & he seemed interested in it, & rather tended to agree with me. In his lecture-course last time, he discussed a theory of Russell's which I, entirely independently, had ~~reproduced~~ brought up in class last year.

I don't know what on earth to do in the vacation. Cambridge will be as dreary as can be, but then, so will everywhere else in this country. I can get ~~no~~ one to take a trip with me, and if I could, there would be nowhere to go at this season.

Goodbye,
With love,
Markie.

Dear ma:

No news: term is over, but I shall stay here for a while & work on my article. I loafed today, however. Yesterday I saw R. about my work, & found out what to study during the vacation. I had some books of mine bound the other day.

R. does not seem particularly at all interested in anything I do. I suppose it is due to the fact that he is so taken up with the war. He does not find any positive errors in my work, but finds my analyses entirely inadequate, logically. He is not so well satisfied with my latest piece as Moore, & even Moore, while he admits it may be worth working up, does not seem much interested in it.

Good bye
With love
Robert.

I hope you are all well at home. I wish I were there, and I shant really enjoy myself till I get there.

Goodbye,

Dear dad:

As term is over,

from tomorrow I shall spend a fortnight seeing England. Then I shall get again to work.

I have seen the papers set.

YESTERDAY MORNING
10 OCTOBER 1910
I have just corrected
the proofs of my mathematical article.
Hardy calls it very pretty. He says that when I first told him what I intended to do, he never imagined I could do it by such simple means. I found so many blunders in my first version of it that I shall have to see the proof a second time. It is only two or three pages long.

I'm glad you are writing a new book. I hope you don't overwork it was right to see Clark about it.

How I hate this country!

I wish I had never taken the Sheldon. I feel entirely out of place in Cambridge. I cannot perform the intellectual gymnastics which are essential to anyone who is to be thought of any account whatever at Cambridge. Then I feel hopelessly uneducated here. My languages are hopelessly bad, my history is the same, my mathematics is mediocre, and my science is superficial. In addition to which, I am very little good at philosophy. I would undoubtedly fail in

Dear ma:

I have begun work again: there is nothing but work for me to do in Cambridge, and the weather is such as to make travelling highly unpleasant. I wouldn't take another Sheldon for $2000.

Saturday I shall start travelling. I shall go with Eliot if I can. I don't know where I shall go. I shall see Oxford.

A picture of Cambridge weather and then, perhaps, go to Wales.

The thing I shall have enjoyed most of my stay in England is getting on the boat next June. I sincerely hope that it will never be my misfortune to see this side of the Atlantic again.

It has been raining for more than two weeks.

Dear ma:

I am working a little in the vacation. I have shown what I have written of my latest article to Moore, & talk it over with him this evening. Saturday I leave Cambridge: I shall spend a day or so in London, and meet Eliot, and then I shall go to Oxford and see the town. From Oxford?

shall start a walking-trip. I shall take enough cash along with me.

How are you all at home? I hope you are well and happy. When I get there I won't be in any hurry to leave it again.

Goodbye,

Your loving son,

My dear Wiener,
 I have just recovered from a great cold. It is not quite gone, but on its way.
 I wonder where you are. Are you still staying in Cambridge?

What has happened to your tramping? I am afraid I am not strong enough to go out touring in this exceedingly bad weather. It has been raining here, or rather pouring, I since the last 4 or 5 days. Only yesterday it was a nice day, but it is raining again today.

Hope you are keeping well.

Yours sincerely
R.C. Soni

Dear Robert,

The Germans must be mad off for orders to have attacked Hartlepool and civilians. But that is the way they do business.

I hope you will have a nice vacation, and take it easy.
Go to Wales, or wherever you can find decent weather.

Do not worry about your medicines, because if you are medicore you are pretty sure to get a good job. Take it easy, and if you can't do any thing else, earn the francs.

I am hard at work on "The Russian Soul". I have already written 15,000 out of 70,000 words, and it ~~sounds~~ good. May be I can make a living ~~there~~ out of it. As I get 15¢ after the first 2,500 copies (for them I get 10¢), I ought to make enough.

Wong out of 2 & buy a farm in New Hampshire.

Dear ma:

You see, I am in London now. I thought a week or two of change would do me no harm, so I took it. My landlady takes forwards all my mail to me. I go to movies, see the sights, etc., & wait to meet Eliot, who will be here this week. I knew him well at Harvard — he was Fingolfs at the Tripas papers I knew I could not pass them without a lot of preparation. M. said that, on the contrary, he thought I was the best of the junior members of the club (i.e. of all but the dons themselves).

I am staying at the hotel you recommended to me last year, & eating at the Vegetarian restaurant.

I talked over my latest paper with Moore the other day (It is not yet finished) Moore criticized it a good deal, but thought it well worth while working up & publishing. I was feeling a little blue at the time, I told M. I felt rather out of place among the members of the Moral Science club (since I had been looking

Dear dad:

I am O.K. I have been to see the British Museum, the Abbey, etc., and am already becoming able to find my way about London. Eliot will be here today, so I shall meet him — I knew him fairly well at Flaxford. I go was the only person in the world), and wondered why more people didn't agree with her! Her symbol is logic possesses no advantages over Russell's except a certain symmetry which may give some people a slight aesthetic pleasure, but is of no real importance. Her symbolism is probably completely ^{unadapted} to the highly complicated problems with which Russell deals. It is every bit as absurd for her to demand that I use her symbolism as it would be for you to demand that the everyday mathematician use his symbolism. She is an example of the worst type of pedant.

I shall go back and finish my new article before term begins. Moore thinks it will be fit for Mind. Isn't it a shame — it will only be my third this year! I have not yet heard whether my second is accepted or not. The present article is by all odds the most important piece of philosophical work I have done. There's a lot of hairsplitting in it, however (why not call it trichotomy?).

Mrs. Ladd-Franklin, though a clever woman, is a conceited old crank. She wrote to Russell once, stating that she was a solipsist (i.e. believed, metaphysically speaking, that she

I figure that my total expenses from the time I left Boston till the time I land in Boston will be about $650, or less. This is allowing at least $50 for extra expenses in the Easter vacation, incurred in travelling, etc., and is a maximum estimate. It covers everything. It leaves me $350 when I come home. Taking off $100 for clothes, I shall have a quarter of my Sheldon left when I land in Boston. I shall then have 126 days to spend with you till the year from when I got on the boat is over. I don't know how much my living-expenses are at home, but putting them at $2 a day, ~~you~~ my Sheldon will have just kept me through the year.

Dear ma:

Tomorrow I return to Cambridge, to work until term begins. I hope to finish my paper in a week or so. I met Eliot ^{day before} yesterday, I had my Christmas dinner with him. In the spring vacation he and I are going to France, and I shall try to get Muscio to come along also.

Christmas, as I was walking down Southampton row, I met a lady whom I had met on the boat - a Mrs.

I found that I had to pay him directly, not through any lecture fund, so I had got no bill last year), which makes 32 5d a week 22s for the Union, or 22 2d a week, sixpence a week for stamps, about 32 or 32 6d a week for chocolate & amusements, and about 8d or thereabouts for repairing shoes etc., and a shilling or two over for ~~extra~~ various things. My expenses for the vacation are considerably under 60s a week, ~~including~~ ~~for~~ railway fares. My next term's tuition fees will be about 42 0d, or four guineas less than my present ones, saving me 8d a week, making my expenses about 54 2 6d a week, thus bringing my average for the two terms rather less than 60s a week. I shall also cut down the 3 2 6d for chocolate and amusements.

Potts, the wife of the head of some sort of agricultural school in Australia. She had me over to tea with her husband and herself.

I have just been reckoning up my expenses for last term. I am ashamed to say that I averaged 63 2 ~~6~~ a week instead of the 60s which you gave me permission to spend. It is divided about as follows:

Room, board, and washing and baths, about 38s 4d; Books, for the term (including the binding of some paper-backed volumes of mine which were going to pieces) 29¹/₂ 6d for the whole term of ten weeks: i. e. 3s 2d a week; University fees, 134s 6d (I found out that I owed two guineas to Moore for last year, for

They are probably, however, considerably less. That means that you will probably have left from $75 to $100 of my Sheldon at the end of the year. Of course, all this is the upper limit of my expenses. They will probably be very considerably less, and if you want me to, I can cut them down by taking cheaper rooms, etc.

Many thanks to you all for that Xmas telegram. It is good to hear from home.

Yours loving son,
Norbert

Dear ma:

Thanks awfully for my Xmas presents: you couldn't have got me anything which would possibly suit me better - especially the Photograph. I am back in Cambridge, and have begun work again on my paper - 5 hours today - thought term does not begin for more than two weeks. Cambridge is most desolate and uninteresting at present - Union closed, college libraries closed, no students in town,
troops here, troops there, troops everywhere,
and ambulances, horses, transport wagons, etc. The prospects are that next term will only see eight or nine-hundred students at most still in Cambridge, if that many.
The dons ~~are~~ will be lecturing to sadly depleted courses, and will, as last term, spend most of this term moping; doing nothing.

all falling back into my Cornell ways. This, however, is a singularly unpleasant time to be in a singularly unpleasant country.

I did not see Zangwill when I was in London — I only took along with me the suit I had on my back, as I did not want to be encumbered with much baggage, — and could not, very well have visited anyone in it — in London, at least, for, though it was neat, of course, it got a little mussed with travelling, and anyhow, I ~~got~~ could not very well have gone except in my black suit.

I believe that I acknowledged my £20, if not at once, at least within a week. My letter probably got lost in the posts (I write to you three times a week)

I have ordered a second-hand copy of the first two volumes of the Principia. Yesterday, as you told me to get a present for myself if I wanted it, I got a very amusing book by Stephen Leacock, the Canadian humorist, for 32^{6d}, entitled, Arcadian Adventures Among the Old Rich. He is a professor at the University of Toronto.

The weather has been abominable for the past two months — fog, rain, rain, and rain. Today we had our first snowfall — not half an inch, immediately turning into slush. I do not expect to see a decent day until I get back home. One feels uncomfortable all the time, though the thermometer scarcely ever drops to freezing. One can excuse the English for a lot of their national disagreeableness when one reflects on the horrible place they have to live in. I dress warmly, of course, and have had no cold for a long time now.

I am rewriting the first part of my paper, and shall finish it long before term begins. Then I shall work on Seilniss, as Mr. Russell recommended me to. My paper takes a lot of straightening out, and I am sure that though Dr. Moore thought it worth while fixing up, it will not suit Mr. Russell. However, I shall finish it and see.

I have just sent my clothes to be pressed, though they were not in really shabby condition. I keep looking neat, and am not at

Dear Ma:

I am still at work on my paper, and am doing other vacation work besides - 5 hrs. a day. I went this afternoon to the movies. My paper is looking a little better to me.

Cambridge is a dead town - everything or almost everything closed. News doesn't flourish here, so I hardly know what to write you. I hope you are all well at home. I haven't heard from Conta for quite a while. This makes me almost wish I were with you all in Munich again, as last Xmas. I almost wish an invasion or airship raid or something of that sort would come off, so as to compell me to come straight home to you again. If there is any decent excuse of that sort, I won't stay! The first Zeppelin that comes over Cambridge, I leave! But don't you be worried about Zeppelins: there's more chance in England of dying of the measles, or steer-boredness, than by Zeppelins and shells put together. Besides, I doubt if any Zeppelin or aeroplanes will ever get much past the censor. Even if they do, they'll never get past the censor: nothing does.

One isn't certain whether what one reads in the papers is diluted truth or undiluted lie.

How Monsterbrag? still bragging, I suppose. Eliot said they wrote to him from America that ~~when~~ within 4 & 8 hours after any of the big articles, ~~had~~ had a better and more logical article, refuting it.

Goodbye,
With much love
Norbert L.
